

Declaring Reason (Exhibition)

Imposed Arguments of Political Books

Niels Schrader, Lauren Alexander

Artist contribution – August 9, 2017

Declaring Reason* is a collaboration between Museum Meermanno and the KABK – Royal Academy of Arts in the Hague that presents the works of third-year Graphic Design students who investigate the history of parliamentary democracy by means of books and manuscripts from Museum Meermanno's collection. The exhibition juxtaposes books from the museum's historical collection with innovative new impressions by students, and is on show for the public from 3 June until 24 September 2017. Declaring Reason was tutored by Niels Schrader and Lauren Alexander from the Royal Academy of Arts and included theory component tutoring by Maarten Cornel. Guest critics were Alice Twemlow and Olivier Arcioli.

Changing Paradigms

Daniel Hernández and Dóra Kerekes

Daniel Hernández and Dóra Kerekes have created a digital platform, which compares selected words from Diderot's Encyclopédie with definitions from Wikipedia. The main objective is to determine, by means of word frequency analysis, the various agencies and concerns of different historical periods. The comparison makes apparent that the common definition of truth is slowly but constantly changing.

Counterfeit Knighthood

Hilde Barwegen

Hilde Barwegen's video documentation Counterfeit Knighthood zooms into the living and working environment of Dutch nobleman Joan Derk van der Capellen tot den Pol by carefully recording his remaining physical traces throughout the Netherlands. Idyllic, peaceful scenes of Dutch village life where radical and influential ideas were born, are contrasted with implicit luxurious wealth deriving from Dutch colonialism of the same period. This raises the question about Van der Capellen tot den Pol's true motives for starting a revolution against the political elite of his time.

Declaring Word

Antonia Brell and Rebecca Rui

The society Rousseau envisioned is coordinated and unified by the so-called “general will” that aims at the common good or common interest (as opposed to the “individual” or “particular” will). With their work, Antonia Brell and Rebecca Rui seek to create a space of playful, social interaction in which the audience can put Rousseau’s vision into reality by paraphrasing or rephrasing passages from The Social Contract. Presented with a set of words, the visitors are encouraged to formulate their own opinion on how society is currently shaped and upload their statement to the website www.we-construct.net.

Do Not Cross!

Kay Pizarowitz and Marika Seo

In their work Kay Pizarowitz and Marika Seo respond to Spinoza’s call for secular humanism and free moral judgment by testing the general boundaries of freedom of speech in the context of satire. Since the dividing line between political correctness and censorship is near imperceptible, Do Not Cross! enjoys the idea of luring its beholder into a false sense of objectivity. It is set up as a life-size flow-chart that allows people to follow a sequence of continuous choices and become aware of how easily a joke can “cross the line”. Despite its scale, the project only displays a miniscule fragment of what is in fact an endless debate.

EU Coherence

Taisiia Reshetnik and Theresa Scherrer

Taisiia Reshetnik and Theresa Scherrer analysed the constitution of all European countries based on selected parameters like date of publishing, prioritised topics, language patterns and structure. Their thorough research into formal aspects of constitutional texts has resulted in their own visual interpretation of European national identity in the form of flags.

Fifth Grade

Iris Lam and Lou Top

In their film Fifth Grade Iris Lam and Lou Top document their self-initiated lesson for ten-year-old children at a primary school in the Hague in order to reflect on Rousseau's pedagogical thoughts on education as key to becoming a committed demos. The documentary not only reveals the pupils' capacity to translate an abstract political mandate into concrete group behaviour but also nicely illustrates the first signs of growing social responsibility at an early age.

The Frame of Singularity

Elizaveta Glukhova and Jungeun Lee

Elizaveta Glukhova and Jungeun Lee explored Spinoza's ideas on the boundaries between individual moral values and general law. In his political paper "A Political Treatise", Spinoza explains the dilemma within installing, for the benefit of all, a system of obedience and governance while simultaneously trying to preserve as many personal freedoms as possible. During their quest to find out more about jurisprudence and morality, the students asked several interviewees to voice their personal opinions and describe the challenges in developing an instructive legal framework. The resulting interviews were presented as a multi-screen installation.

God / Devil is in the Details

Saber Javanmard

Saber Javanmard is fascinated by the mythical illustrations of angels and sea monsters, naval battles and treasuries that illuminate the maps inside Atlas Maior. In a book of exactly the same dimensions as the original atlas, Saber zooms into the details of medieval cartography in order to uncover the political dimensions of seemingly insignificant, decorative map elements. It appears, namely, that these particular illustrations depict primary political behaviour such as assembling, debating, voting, governing and lobbying.

Happiness on Sale

Nóra Békés and Wannes Vrijs

Nóra Békés and Wannes Vrijs focus on Spinoza's radical seventeenth-century ideas about religion and society. Advertising boards with different quotes by the Dutch philosopher were put up in public spaces and busy shopping streets in the Hague in order to spread Spinoza's warnings. While Spinoza warned in his Tractatus Theologico Politicus about the risks of misleading the public through religion, Békés and Vrijs remind their audience about the dangers of capitalism as a new cult.

An Overtaken Future

Rudi van Delden and Jan Egbers

Joan Derk van der Capellen tot den Pol's motivation to write the pamphlet Aan het volk van Nederland is strongly based on a sense of nostalgia, fondly referring to the period of Batavian settlement. Rudi van Delden and Jan Egbers take this as a starting point to critically address contemporary politicians' nostalgia for the industrialized 1960s. It seems that in today's political landscape, both the left and right look back on a time when the ever-increasing privatization of today was still far away and sovereignty was considered authority rather than responsibility. The question remains as to what is left out of the picture when longing for the past is being put to use as a political instrument?

Reconstructing Power

Vanessa Eck and Rebecca Joly

In their work, Vanessa Eck and Rebecca Joly investigate how Jean Jacques Rousseau’s concept of the “general will” is applied within the European voting system. They created detailed timelines that document the events of electoral periods in France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Germany.

Social Environments

Anna Lenczewska and Natalia Vishnevskaja

Social Environments is a printed glossary that compares Rousseau’s The Social Contract to the terms and conditions of modern social media communication. Anna Lenczewska and Natalia Vishnevskaja bring attention to the similar and dissimilar connections between two social environments from different time periods and shift the term social contract towards a very new meaning.

Niels Schrader (1977, Caracas, VE) is a concept-driven information designer with a fascination for numbers and data. He is founder of the Amsterdam-based design studio Mind Design and member of the AGI – Alliance Graphique Internationale. Next to his design practice Schrader has been lecturing at the Delft University of Technology, ArtEZ – Academy of Art & Design in Arnhem and Willem de Kooning Academie in Rotterdam. Since January 2013 he is co-head of the Graphic Design department at the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague. In his work, Schrader plays the role of both a mediator and a designer. He considers communication to be an interactive process that requires participation through questioning. See further: www.minddesign.info.

Lauren Alexander (1983, ZA) is a designer and artist. She teaches in BA and MA Graphic Design at the Royal Academy of Art, The Hague (KABK) and in 2019 she was a member of the KABK Research Group chaired by Alice Twemlow. Her collaboration with designer Ghalia Elsrakbi (1978, SY) initiated in 2009 has informed her practice and teaching. As Foundland Collective Lauren and Ghalia explore under-represented political and historical narratives by working with archives via art, design, writing, educational formats, video making and storytelling. The duo critically reflects upon what it means to produce politically engaged work from their position as non-Western artists working between Europe and the Middle East. Foundland Collective was awarded the Smithsonian Artist Research Fellowship for research in the largest Arab American archive in 2015, the outcome of which was presented as a video installation at Centre Pompidou in Paris (2017) and their short video, 'The New World, Episode One' premiered at the Rotterdam Film Festival (2018). The duo have lectured and exhibited internationally including at ISPC, New York, Ars Electronica, Linz, Fikra Biennial, Sharjah and Tashweesh Feminist Festival, Cairo and Brussels. Their work has been shortlisted for the Dutch Prix de Rome in 2015 and Dutch Design Awards in 2016.

Photography: Roel Backaert

Tags

Democracy, Design, Open! Academy

This text was downloaded on April 16, 2024 from Open! Platform for Art, Culture & the Public Domain www.onlineopen.org/declaring-reason-exhibition